

TRAVERSING TRADITION

Thursday, 19 April | 6.30 p.m. | The Gallery @ InKo Centre

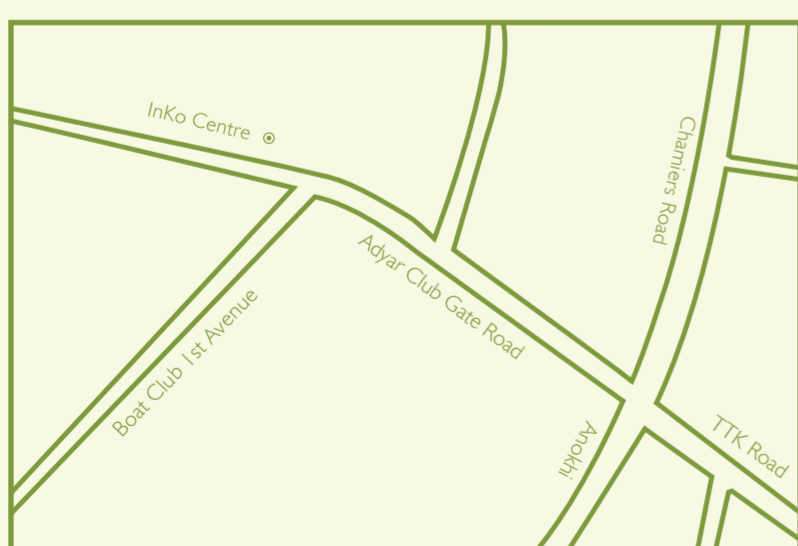

Traversing Tradition

The words 'traditional' and 'contemporary' are not necessarily mutually exclusive terms but realms that intriguingly overlap and offer unique counterpoints. Tradition evolves in relation to the globalised world and vice versa, each absorbing elements of the other and undergoing a constant process of metamorphosis. Each serves to infuse, inform and perpetuate age-old identities or to herald emergent thought processes.

Traversing Tradition features the works of 4 contemporary artists for whom 'tradition' is both subject matter and an invaluable reference point for evolving a unique and richly nuanced visual language. For these artists, tradition serves as a framework to document the richness of life around or as a mirror that reflects the changing world in relation to the self. The dynamic ways in which each of these artists provide terms of reference offer an interesting conduit that invites further introspection, interrogation and interpretation.
