Rabindranath Tagore comes alive in the works of seven Korean artists. Curator of the show "The Lamp of the Bast", Insang Song, talks about the artistic ties between

The lamp of the east

In the golden age of Asia

Korea was one of its lamp-bearers

And that lamp is waiting to be lighted once again

For the illumination in the east

(The Lamp of the East, Rabindranath Tagore,1929)

Over 80 years after Tagore wrote these words, the lamp will burn bright in tribute to the poet and Nobel laureate, right here in Chennai. 'The Lamp of the East', a one-of-a-kind exhibition at Lalit Kala Akademi, will feature the works of seven major artists from Korea, who pay their respects to Tagore and, in the process, showcase some of the best of contemporary Korean high art.

"Everybody in Korea knows and respects Tagore — I remember studying his poems in junior high school," says Insang Song, the curator of the exhibition. "At the time of the Japanese occupation of Korea, his poems carried a message of hope for the oppressed Korean people."

The exhibition is the brainchild of Song, an independent curator and art critic who has an enduring love for India and Indian art. "A lot has changed in the last 80 years — now, Korea is a rich country, a developed country — and I often think back to Tagore's words," he says. "Korean contemporary art has today become very important in Asia, and I thought it only right to bring some of it here to India."

THE OLD AND THE NEW

The seven artists represent different generations of the contemporary art scene in Korea, from older, established artists such as Jheon Soccheon, whose large-scale installations are known the world over, to rising stars such as Lee Gwang Ho, whose unusual style has been garnering considerable attention of

"Twe noticed that, often, just middling-level artists from Korea come here to exhibit, and I wanted to change that; I wanted an exhibition of top-level artists," says Song, who was the curator of Seoul Arts Centre for over 20 years. "I'we specially commissioned some of the works for this exhibition."

The works remain immersed in contemporary Korean aesthetic, eve explore how each of the artists relates to Tagore, his ideals, and to India at large. Although the number is limited — just 14 pieces — they cover a variety of styles, from paintings and sculptures to high-tech video art and interactive installations

"This collection is, I think, quite representative of the current art scene in Korea, but I'd like to do a bigger show next time," says Song, "and perhaps take it to Delhi and Kolkata as well, in time for Tagore's 150th anniversary."

The decision to bring 'The Lamp of the East' to Chennai came out of Song's own close ties to the city. This is the first place he visited in India in 2006 while putting together 'Hybrid Trends', the first-ever group show of Indian contemporary art in Korea, featuring the work of 14 artists, including Chennai's Benita Perciyal. Since then, he's done a number of Indian art shows in Korea, featuring artists from all over the country, but his affinity for Chennai remains.

"You know, the Korean language has many similarities for Tamil. We even call our parents 'amma' and 'appa'. Perhaps it's because of that, but I always feel at home in Chennai. So, I thought, why not begin the exhibition here?

Song likes to trace the connections between India and Korea in more ways than one — and it goes much further back than Tagore. "In A.D. 48, King Suro of Korea married an Indian princess," he says, adding with a smile: "So, you see, the relationship between Indian and Korea has always been romantic and artistic, not martial, like that between Korea and Japan or China."

Not surprisingly, he says it's his dream to strengthen the bonds of art between the two countries. 'The Lamp of the Bast' is certainly a wonderful start.

(The exhibition is on from November 3 to 13).
